Information systems are an important factor in a sales system, especially for MSMEs (Micro, Small, and Medium Enterprises) which have a high level of routine and require managed data management. The importance of information systems for companies is to facilitate good information work activities for consumers, owners, or employees. Because Kopi Rahmat is a new shop, the information system used is still relatively simple. Therefore, this coffee shop required several information systems that would be used to facilitate data collection on the sales process. The system development method used was the Prototype model system development method. With the existence of an information system, the management of coffee inventory and sales data became more organized and the available inventory information system became more accurate. The use of this information system could help the owner of Kopi Rahmat to manage daily sales operations.
